Suggested Article: 'Charity Starts with You'

Charity is the act of giving help, time, or resources to people in need without expecting anything in return. It is an essential pillar of a strong and compassionate society. In Algeria, charity takes many forms, such as distributing food baskets to poor families during Ramadan, collecting clothes for orphans, and running blood donation campaigns. Charity is deeply important because it reduces poverty, bridges the gap between social classes, and spreads love and solidarity among citizens. Moreover, it teaches young people civic responsibility and empathy. Therefore, I strongly encourage all my classmates to take part in local solidarity campaigns and volunteer works. Remember that even a small act of kindness can change someone's life and build a more united community.
